About Sister Mary Pellegrino, CSJ

From 2008-2018 Sister Mary served as Congregational Moderator of her community, the Sisters of St. Joseph of Baden, Pa. From 2015-2018 Mary also served in the presidency of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious (LCWR) in the United States. In both of those roles Mary worked to support, encourage and promote the ongoing renewal of religious life in the face of unprecedented challenges and changes in the Church, American society and the global community.

Prior to serving in congregational leadership, Mary served in vocation/formation ministries for her congregation as well as parish and campus ministries. Over the years Mary has written and presented extensively on topics related to vocation/formation and religious life. She holds a Master's degree in Christian Spirituality and a certificate in Spiritual and Retreat Direction from Creighton University, along with a Master's degree in Religious Education from Fordham University.
